Angel Thoughts

Who Am I Really?

Hello Earth Angels,

It has been quite some time since we last communicated, however all of you who I have connected with through e-mail, phone, workshops and Doreen Virtue events (yes I mean you Toronto Earth Angels) have been in my thoughts and I appreciate your support of my light work and for holding loving thoughts and intentions for me during this time of tremendous change. I have settled into my new life in Southern California and I enjoy the physical beauty along with supportive and gentle healing energies of my new environment. My daily commute consists of hills of luminous green and orange colors, the vast calmness of the ocean and the majestic patriarchal strength of the Saddleback mountain range. I am filled with gratitude at the sight of such beauty. For me this is a magical uplifting vibration.

Although my days begin and end with this beautiful picture, I am still called to spiritual practice, during this time of change because the world as I knew it to be is no longer; faces are different and most of all my mind has shifted. I still find myself teetering back and forth between the new me and the out dated thoughts that just don't seem to work any more. My move has triggered tremendous change in my life and a call to heal and remember who I really am.

My call has been to transmute the old pain into expansion and learning; accepting it as the strength and gifts that it truly meant to be. This is not always the most comfortable process, but I am learning through my guides and Angels that this does not have to be hard or completed as soon as I think the thought. It does take some commitment; a daily spiritual practice will make your transition much more loving because God and the Angels are always guiding us in the direction of joy. But we often do not take the time to listen fully. Spiritual practice is personal and sacred and is just as important as nourishing the body with food. Spiritual practice is care of the soul.
